

Strategy Overview

Free cash flow has long been emphasized by investors as a key predictor of a company's strength. Companies that pay cash dividends, one indication of strong free cash flow, have historically outperformed the broader market. Focusing strictly on dividend payments, however, misses two key indicators of strong free cash flow: net share repurchases and net debt paydown. The manager believes that a focus on all three factors - dividend payments, net share repurchases and net debt paydown, a trio collectively known as shareholder yield - produces a portfolio of companies that offer strong free cash flow characteristics.

Fund Description

The Cambria Shareholder Yield ETF is an actively managed fund that employs the manager's quantitative algorithm to select U.S. listed companies that show strong characteristics in returning free cash flow to their shareholders. Specifically, SYLD invests in 100 stocks with market caps greater than $200 million that rank among the highest in (a) paying cash dividends, (b) engaging in net share repurchases, and (c) paying down debt on their balance sheets.

There is no guarantee that the Fund will achieve its investment goal. Investing involves risk, including the possible loss of principal. High yielding stocks are often speculative, high risk investments. The underlying holdings of the fund may be leveraged, which will expose the holdings to higher volatility and may accelerate the impact of any losses. These companies can be paying out more than they can support and may reduce their dividends or stop paying dividends at any time, which could have a material adverse effect on the stock price of these companies and the Fund's performance. Emerging markets involve heightened risks related to the same factors as well as increased volatility and lower trading volume. Investments in smaller companies typically exhibit higher volatility. Narrowly focused funds typically exhibit higher volatility.
